BIOGRAPHY

Miranda grew up in Wilton, Wisconsin and joined the military at seventeen years of age. She served eight years in the Army as a construction equipment mechanic. Shortly after her tour on active duty, she attended UW-Milwaukee where she received her BFA in Fine Arts in 2009. Throughout her career as an artist, she has competed in several local juried exhibitions and has shown her wearable art in fashion shows at the Milwaukee Art Museum. Her artwork compares the decoration of domestic spaces with the decoration of the female body, and explores how identity is formed through this process of camouflage. Miranda is currently working as a curator of Tenth Street Gallery, a freelance fashion designer, and a children's photographer for Life Touch Pre-School Photography.
